

HISTORICAL PLACES

Did you know that National Gallery Singapore is housed in two national monuments? Explore the unique architectural features of the Gallery, in bold below.

Two link bridges connect the former Supreme Court and City Hall buildings.

Located in the atrium between the buildings, the bridges are complemented by a distinctive metal and glass canopy supported by tree-like columns.

Did you know that the former Supreme Court has two domes?

The smaller of the two domes, the Rotunda dome, can be seen up close at Supreme Court Terrace.

The flooring of the Former Supreme Court foyer was restored, with the original eight-sided foundation stone intact.

Underneath the stone lies a time capsule, to be opened in the year 3000, containing Straits Settlements currency and newspapers.

Imagine you are an architect. Design a building inspired by the architectural features of National Gallery Singapore.

