Singapore, 3 November 2015 – National Gallery Singapore today announced more than 20 free events and activities for the public to be immersed in engaging and moving art experiences at the Gallery's opening celebrations and inaugural art festival. Spanning over two weeks from 24 November to 6 December 2015, National Gallery Singapore's Opening Celebrations will offer a diverse programme designed to captivate and kindle a curiosity for art.

Public will enjoy free admission to the exhibitions at the two permanent galleries, the DBS Singapore Gallery and the UOB Southeast Asia Gallery as well as the festivities of the Art Carnival which will be held at the Padang from 27 November to 29 November. Visitors will continue their art journey beyond the walls of the Gallery as they celebrate at the block party at the Padang replete with interactive art installations, community art workshops and artisanal treats. By nightfall, visitors will be enthralled by the Share the Hope Façade Show generously sponsored by Cartier, a stunning display of light and sound designed with inspiration from the art in the museum and set against a grand stage: the facade of the newly transformed National Gallery Singapore.

"As the first museum in the world dedicated to Southeast Asian modern art, National Gallery Singapore aims to provide a differentiated art experience for visitors to fully explore and appreciate art and its history," said Ms Suenne Tan, Director, Education and Programmes, National Gallery Singapore. "We crafted activities to give the public many ways and reasons to connect with art, inspiring more to develop a deeper understanding of Singapore and Southeast Asian art and its links with art all around the world.”

Making art accessible and easy to learn more about, the opening celebrations will include art forums and a panel discussion that will provide an inside look into the Gallery’s part in promoting Southeast Asian art. Visitors will have the opportunity to hear more from curators, art critics and architects about the evolution of Southeast Asian art in the region, the changing roles of museums, as well as the architecture, design and conservation principles of the Gallery.

Theatre and film buffs can also look forward to plays inspired by artworks, the world premiere of three local short films that realise the Opening themes of memory and hope, as well as a special selection of over 30 films from the 26th Singapore International Film Festival. The new interpretations of artworks extend to dance and music that will be performed in surprising spaces and venues within the Gallery. (for full programme listing, please refer to Annex A).

Exploration of the Gallery spaces and art will be enhanced by the new Gallery Explorer app which the public can download for free from Apple’s App Store from 18 November and from Google Play Store shortly after. Created in collaboration with the Gallery’s Innovation Partner Accenture, the app enables intelligent indoor navigation across the Gallery’s 64,000 sq m area, proactively giving information on the art within the vicinity. The app is also integrated with social media capabilities, allowing users to share their experiences with friends and create conversations about the art at the museum (for more details, please refer to the Galley Explorer factsheet).

All visitors will enjoy complimentary entry to National Gallery Singapore, its exhibitions and the opening celebrations from 24 November to 6 December 2015. For more information about the upcoming activities and registration requirements, please visit www.nationalgallery.sg (for visitors’ information, please refer to Annex B).

Mon 30 Nov – Thu 3 Dec | top of each hour from 10am – 6pm

30 minutes | Supreme Court Wing, Level 5, Theatrette

The world premiere of three short films specially commissioned to realise the Opening Festival's themes of memory and hope.

STUDY OF A SINGAPOREAN FACE by Kan Lumé and Megan Wonowidjoyo

Over 1,000 hand-drawn portraits of MRT commuters, at their most open and unguarded, are photographed and woven together to create this animated short. As the film progresses, the camera moves in to show a crowd of people who are alone together. And yet, they experience the tension of finding a space for themselves. Space, for them, is what is hoped for.

BILA LARUT MALAM (In the Still of the Night) by Sanif Olek

In this musical juxtaposition of P Ramlee's Nak Dara Rindu (Young Maiden's Longing) and Zubir Said's Semoga Bahagia (May You Achieve Happiness), we hear the individual and the national, romantic doubt and decisive confidence. In this film, three women struggle with an acute sense of loss related to the men in their lives, but finds new strength amid the sorrow.

SILENT LIGHT by Liao Jiekai

An elderly voice shares memories of growing up in a Singapore that no longer exists, on the passing of a generation, and her acceptance of death. Deep into the night, suffused by the dry rhythm of mechanical fans, a mourner is accompanied by restless phantoms and a lonely moth perches on the yellow funeral tent. Together, they welcome the silent light of daybreak.

Curated by Philip Cheah.

This collection launches the annual film commission series titled readings, which features the world premieres of Southeast Asian short films on the art in the Gallery.
